

UU Congregation of the Catskills Introduces Amateur Scientists Group

The UU Congregation of the Catskills (Kingston NY) has introduced an Amateur Scientists Group to study and discuss topics from a wide variety of scientific disciplines.

The Amateur Scientists Group is open to members and friends of the Congregation and to the general public. It meets one evening per month, with an attendance of 20-25. Its members study and offer presentations on topics chosen by the Group.

Topics already given or planned for the near future include Evolution, The Big Bang, Plate Tectonics, Perception, Special and General Relativity, The Birth and Death of Stars, and Consciousness. Reading materials are suggested two weeks prior to the meeting to provide information and facilitate discussion.
